In my controller, I have the following code: @review = Review.find_all_by_user_id_and_article_id(@current_user, params[:id]) Then in the view, I have the following code: If the code is run directly on the server, the above code will return no records: review.each do |r| However, if I run this on the server: It will return the correct value: Can anyone shed some light as to why I can't access the record variables? A: When you do @review = Review.find_all_by_user_id_and_article_id(@current_user, params[:id]) The instance variables @review and @current_user are assigned, but they get destroyed when you leave the method. This means, that when you are accessing them within the view, they are nil because of this destructor. That's
