You start the game in a 3D living room. You will see a scene mapped to the stereoscopic display. The setup can be done directly in the game with a mouse click. The game proposes you to get familiar with the game controls, and provide an input window. Of course, you can press the buttons on the controller as well, as it is very convenient to use the real controller in this case. This 3D living room scene is the one that leads you through the game, which is a 2D puzzle game. The game is played from one perspective at a time, in chapters of 5 levels. You get the impression of moving a 3D model through a flat scene. In this living room you find yourself with a controller and a classic input window where you could in theory press a button or press any number of keys, which would move the character that represents your control for the next level. The controls are selected according to the keyboard and mouse events, which come in the game a function key, or a mouse-click or a joystick move. Using these controls, you need to rotate the mouse and click on several canvases. The goal of the game is to rotate as much as possible or to click on all the canvases of a given size. Under the main difficulty, there is a way to let the character jump with a button-press. The possibility of each chapter to be restarted is provided by the Autoplay feature. General Features of the Game Gameplay: The game, Sterio-Play, is a 2D puzzle. You are challenged to rotate the mouse to match the selected painting on canvases whose size is set with the mouse. When you click, the object will rotate around the axis that cross the mouse (which will be represented on the screen, and you'll be able to move it). When you move the mouse, the angular position will be automatically modified, so that the mouse will be very close the selection icon represented on the screen. At each stage, three objects will be displayed on the screen. They correspond to the three axes of the image. The game consists of moving these objects on the screen to cover all the canvases. Each canvas will be colored with a corresponding color. The size of the canvases will be controlled by the mouse, and will be displayed on the screen. The mouse controls are easy to use. You simply move the mouse on the canvases. The game offers a variety of settings to control the realism and complexity of
