Match 3 GamePlay with matching 3 or more objects. New Puzzle, Match 3 & Image Based Game - Set the pace by solving simple to very complex puzzles. Multiple Game Modes - Intuitive controls for easy mouse movement. Multi-platform Game Play - Platform and device supported. I Love Finding Pups: While you traverse the busy streets of San Francisco, you may come across cute dogs begging for a few coins to help them heal. Deciding to help out, you will need to gather the keys of the different cities scattered across the board, then unlock the doors to each. You will have to either match 3 or more objects on the screen to advance the puzzle or match them in pairs to unlock the puzzle. By reaching all of the cities, you will earn even more coins for helping out the dogs. You will be able to choose from a number of high scoring puzzles to unlock. You can also earn points if you match the objects in a correct pattern. You can use the extra energy you earn to purchase powerups to aid in solving the puzzles. Your goal is to earn as many coins as possible and have fun as you play your way across the board. When you see an item on the map, you can drop an elevator to any floor that contains it. Each room on the floor will feature a set of items that you can match and match 3 to score bonuses. You will also have the ability to play the game in both single and multiplayer modes, or create your own puzzle. Beautiful Graphics: The I Love Finding Pups: The game is fully optimized for your mobile device. The graphics in the game look great on both phones and tablets, with a high resolution and clear, bright colors. The game contains a large number of items that you can match or match 3 for score boosts. The game also has easy to play control, with lots of options to zoom in and out, or rotate the images to see how each object is arranged. The game will also give you on screen instruction for easy to follow game play. C at the Park Dinosaur discovery and a book on Marean climate history point to a new frontier for Fossil Man. When the first dinosaurs began to appear in the Mesozoic era roughly 230 million years ago, it was an unconquered landscape. Only a handful of species lived in the vast grasslands that covered what is now the United States and Canada. The pale landscape was an incredible archaeological time capsule for creatures that died 68 million years ago, with sites strewn across eastern North America now just beginning to be explored. The first dinosaur name attached to North America was Stegosaurus, given to a fossil found in Utah in 1877. The unusual name, which as now known is of Greek origin, was coined to distinguish it from related dinosaurs that lived in Europe. However, Stegosaurus roamed the continent before such exotic names were attached to fossils by paleontologists. It is most famously known as a member of the ceratopsian family of herbivores, an order of horned dinosaur akin to Triceratops. Stegosaurus, Triceratops and another ceratopsian, Edmontosaurus, are commonly grouped as part of the "titanosaurs", a large group of herbivores that lived in the land that became North America during the Late Cretaceous period. The first dinosaurs The combination of an environmental mystery and a language barrier left the discovery of more later North American dinosaurs, as well as a broader perspective on the flora and fauna of the region, in the hands of a Swiss paleontologist, Othniel Charles Marsh, who lived briefly in Utah in 1879. Moving across the border from the newly formed state of Utah at the time of his visit, Marsh spent four months traversing the deserts and badlands of the Great Basin during which time he recognized several new species of dinosaur, finding of the upper jaw of an armoured dinosaur and the skeleton of a horned dinosaur, as well as the first evidence of a turtle, which would be later named Dixeyaena lucasi. The dating of the skull and skeleton's specimens from the Elliot dinosaur beds, first published in 1896, marked the first time large dinosaurs were found in North America. But the fossil beds Marsh discovered, known as Elliot Quarry in Utah, were just one of dozens of similar sites in the Great Basin and Western Interior of North America. Since the newly found fossils were 15 million years different in
