They'd promised to come back together as soon as they were married. Mary is among about 130 genealogists who are digging up the past of the current royal family for a new BBC TV series "Genewatch." As she tells it, she now finds herself in the position of the young woman who comes to know the man well but goes on to marry someone else. >> Mary: I became her stepmother, and the role felt totally strange and completely unexpected. But the fact is, I was very new to the family, and it was much more structured than what I was accustomed to, and I think that's what really had the effect on me. >> Sara: Her daughter was the closest to her for the first eight years. >> Mary: She was, you know, just like a little sister, really, and I got a lot of my early emotional security from her. When, as a teenager, I started thinking about having my own children, she told me that she'd be very happy for me to be there. I think that meant a lot to me. >> Sara: Mary knew that her mother's first marriage was a secret. >> Mary: I remember asking her, you know, what was the real reason she did it, why she had to be so secretive, and she explained that there'd been a terrible scandal in the family. >> Sara: This is an important point. It's because of a family scandal b7e8fdf5c8
