In the context of C5-inhibiting therapies, this TC forms a critical step in the neutralization of C5b-9, with inhibition of TC formation resulting in a blockade of C5b-9-mediated pathogenesis and subsequent improvement in survival in animal disease models. In contrast to a critical step in pathogenesis, the formation of a TC is also an important therapeutic mechanism by which these antibodies prevent the activation of (and subsequent pathogenesis induced by) C5a, which is an important mediator of host inflammatory response and innate immune evasion. In the context of this project, both of these roles of TC formation are leveraged to develop small molecule or antibody-like molecules with unique biological properties. To accomplish this, we aim to understand the molecular interactions and dynamics that underlie the formation of TCs using the structure-function relationships of C5/C5b-9 complexes. The first specific aim of this proposal is to characterize the consequences of two critical mutations of human C5 on its activation by natural (human) C5b-9 (C5n-C9). The second specific aim of this proposal is to use the x-ray crystallography and biochemical assays (e.g., surface plasmon resonance, Biolayer Interferometry) of C5/C5b-9/IgG ternary complexes to understand how anti-C5 therapeutics block the formation of C5-C5b-9/IgG ternary complexes by binding C5a. The third specific aim of this proposal is to use a hybrid protein engineering approach to discover new molecules that bind C5b-9, and inhibit C5-mediated pathogenesis. The third specific aim of this project is to discover new molecules that bind C5b-9, and inhibit C5-mediated pathogenesis. Together, the three aims of this project are designed to provide new insights that will lead to the d0c515b9f4

They are usually about the affairs of celebrities and politicians. They have given birth to a new political form that is called "snark." It is characterized by ridicule and sarcasm — all couched in the language of impartial reporting. A lot of people don't get it. They tell me, "It's not subtle. It's not about being smart or about thinking. It's about being mean." Actually, it is about being smart. It is about using the most nuanced language — with the right combination of tone and cadence — to tell the most interesting truths. Take, for example, the recent series about Iraq, called "The War We Lost" (August 1). Instead of telling readers that "U.S. forces found Saddam Hussein hiding in a hole" and describing how he was captured, the reporters tell us that "After an extended operation, U.S. forces rolled in on a golden-brown... birthday cake." What happens to those of us who are preoccupied with Iraq? (The magazine, for reasons I won't attempt to decode, continues to publish sly little essays by Christopher Hitchens and Sam Tanenhaus.) Is snark the new journalism, or the new politics? Am I upset that George Clooney is no longer the most important
