Sixteen massive choruses and 21 guitars later - just like we're used to from them - for the first time Shatter doesn't offer the kids a country song. "Fucked Up" isn't the typical Nu Metal song. The rustiest, heaviest thing that Cobham Road, the band from Cambridge, England, had ever done was a rockin' number. As you can well imagine, it was as if nobody told the band that they had been given a country song and they just went ahead and played the fuck out of it. Astonishingly, it still sounds perfect on the very first listen. "Fucked Up" is a glorious, strange, intriguing and glorious disc. What Is This Record? is the sister album to 18 Years On. It's the third leg of the Rhino Handmade Do You Wanna Tour and the first full-length album from Nu Metal Mafia. The band decided that they would make their comeback back in time to the mid-'90s when nu metal and hair metal were doing their thing, and made a record that sounds like what would happen if Motley Crue and the Boo Radleys had a love child. 2 out of 5 stars Great Stuff... Thursday, February 25, 2008 "The Naked and Famous" - the band featuring Julian Casablancas, who is also in the Strokes and The Voidz - will release its debut album in May. Its first single "Young Blood" will be released on March 27. The Guardian US reported recently that the album is being compared to the St John's Well bands. Artists, you can tell them apart. A few years ago, I took part in a "Challenge of the Week" hosted by Art of Groove and The Carpetbagger's Handbook, where four different "leading rock groups" were to perform three classic rock songs. I was told it would be super easy to do, but I had a hard time assembling together three musicians to play classics from two different genres. The idea of bands like The Naked and Famous to play classic rock was easier to get, but it was still tough. I ended up with two American bands on one side and a British band on the other. At the time, I chose the British band to play a two minute song, because I knew I could get a drummer, bassist and a guitarist. I had a complete band. While American bands are relatively easy to put together, there's not much time to find such musicians as vocalists and guitar players. That said, a "leading American band" putting together a band for an international music competition was a crazy idea, but I'm glad someone did it. Let's see the demos and see if we can get together some bands of yours to play classic rock songs. Wed, February 24, 2008 Kutiman - one of the post-rock bands that I first became a fan of after hearing "The Jump Off" - has a new EP out called "Songs for the Nightingale" and will tour with Avatar. It's a long way to go for a tour starting with two Scottish bands, but I'm curious to see how Avatar's new material is, since I have heard them live a couple times. I don't hear Avatar touring much these days because, if I recall correctly, their last album was not released in the U.S., but if they bring a new album with them on tour, I'll certainly try to attend.
